Trash treasure: In a Dutch museum, a technician accidentally trashed a famous artwork, mistaking it for debris. The piece, by Alexandre Lavet, mimicked dented beer cans and was part of LAM Museum's quirky exhibits that elevate everyday objects. A curator noticed it missing and recovered it just in time. Though unintentional, the museum plans to adjust displays to avoid future mix-ups. This funny slip-up shows how art can turn the ordinary into the extraordinary, sparking thought and conversation.

Rock rhythms: Lithophones—stone instruments that sing when struck—have echoed through time. One from Sudan's Fourth Cataract, made during the Kerma period (2500-1500 B.C.E.), sheds light on ancient rituals. This granite slab, marked with percussion zones, was tapped to produce rich tones during gatherings. Its worn surface speaks to its cultural importance and lasting use. These melodic stones show how music has long connected people through shared experience and ceremony.

Justice fulfilled: A Brazilian woman turned tragedy into purpose after her father was murdered in a bar dispute. The killer fled and evaded justice for decades. Driven by a promise to her family, she became a police officer and pursued the fugitive relentlessly. Her efforts led to his arrest on a remote farm, finally delivering justice. Her story is a testament to resilience and the enduring power of love and commitment.

Illusion artistry: British sculptor Alex Chinneck transforms the ordinary with mind-bending illusions. From melting façades to twisting architecture, his playful public art amazes viewers. Formerly a painter, he found his passion in sculpture at Chelsea College of Arts, using bricks, glass, and more. Works like a building split open or a shattered warehouse blend history with surrealism. With projects across the U.K. and beyond, Chinneck's imagination continues to defy expectations.

Did You Know...

Soundtrack surprise: Disney's Snow White was the first film with an official soundtrack, but none of its songs earned Oscar nods. Walt Disney did get an Honourary Award in 1939 for the groundbreaking film.

Cocktail mystery: The Bloody Mary wasn't always called that. It started as "Bucket of Blood," morphed into "Red Snapper," and finally became Bloody Mary—possibly in honour of Queen Mary I.

Shower genius: Creativity strikes when decision-making parts of the brain rest—like during a shower. This lets other brain areas spark fresh and exciting ideas.

Rabbit quirks: Rabbits' teeth never stop growing, but chewing plants keeps them short. Their side-facing eyes give them almost 360° vision to detect danger.

Deodorant anthem: Nirvana's "Smells Like Teen Spirit" got its name from a deodorant. A friend joked about the brand, and Cobain thought it was a rebellious slogan.

On the Lighter Side

What does a baby computer call its father? Data.

A cat ate cheese and waited for the mouse with baited breath.

Did you hear about the guy who invented the door knocker? He won the no-bell prize.

Sven: "They say you are what you eat."

Oly: "Then let's order something rich."

When I lost my rifle, the Army charged me $85. That's why in the Navy, the captain goes down with the ship.
